14th June " World Blood Donor Day

&

National Mourning for Plane Crash Victims

14th June is observed globally as World Blood Donor Day, a day dedicated to recognising the importance of voluntary blood donation in saving countless lives. This year, the day also brings with it a wave of sorrow, as we grieve the loss of innocent lives in the recent tragic plane crash. Our thoughts and prayers are with the affected families during this painful time.

Honouring Lifesavers " Blood Donor Day

Initiated by the World Health Organization, this day serves as a reminder of the selfless contributions made by voluntary blood donors. Their silent acts of kindness continue to offer hope to those in critical need.

Key Reflections:

A single unit of blood can make a life-saving difference. Blood cannot be manufactured " it relies solely on humanity's generosity. Donating blood is not just a medical act, but a deeply human one. We encourage everyone to reflect on the value of saving lives through compassion and action.

In Memory of the Plane Crash Victims

With heavy hearts, we mourn the souls lost in the tragic plane crash that has left the entire nation in shock.

As an institution committed to both academic growth and social responsibility, we stand together today " to acknowledge those who save lives through donation, and to honour those whose lives were tragically lost.
